

Most Common Pitfalls High School Players Experience

by: Bob Howdeshell
High School Baseball Web

Every parent of a high school player should read this article ... then every player should read it. Even if it does not apply to you or your player, each of us knows someone that should read this. Maybe this will help get the message through to one player

THE BIG THREE

- No sense of urgency that time is slipping by
 - Inability to listen to Coaches and Teachers
 - The way I dress and act is just "my style" and if they want me, they know where to find me, then I will change
-

- Overestimating your own ability level
- Poor personal grooming habits & social skills
- Believing that attitude has very little to do with your appeal to a college coach
- My poor work habits will improve when I get around a college coach
- Very small perspective on baseball abilities of others around the nation
- No sense of urgency to get serious about the work needed to move on
- Being influenced by the wrong type of self-destructive people
- Believing that sportsmanship is not important
- Appearing lazy or lethargic
- Thinking "I'll turn it up when I need to"
- Frequent trips outside the dugout to talk to dad, mom, girlfriend or buddies

Things That Do Not Go Unnoticed

NEGATIVES

- Long Hair & Facial Hair
- Earrings & Tattoos
- Poor fitting uniform
- Being unprepared to play
- Being late for a game
- Smoking
- Drug Use
- Being rude or obnoxious
- Tantrums, swearing, helmet or bat throwing
- Arguing with Umpires
- Frequent trips out of the dugout
- Hanging out with sketchy characters
- Always having an excuse
- Immature behavior
- Sloppy non-athletic appearance
- Inability to communicate
- Walking on and off the field

Things That Do Not Go Unnoticed

POSITIVES

- Clean, well kept appearance
- Wearing the uniform correctly
- Hustle and Enthusiasm
- Backing up bases
- Not missing signals
- Encouraging teammates
- Arriving early to game
- Helping clean up gear after the game
- Calming influence
- Hanging around quality people
- Taking responsibility
- Displaying good character
- A tremendous smile
- Athletic appearance
- Good speaking abilities
- Working hard in the classroom
- Addressing adults with respect (yes sir and yes m'am, etc)

